blanket for her bed.

"It's nice to know that she's wearing the sweater all the time that I provided for her," Olson said. "And sleeping under the blankets that I provided. Araya totally reminded me of my students in Taiwan."

When he moves back to Asia to compete on the Renault Championship circuit, Olson said he hopes to visit with Araya and her family.

He called his other sponsored child, Shivarene, an "inspiration."

"Shivarene is an inspiration to me because he wants to be a professional cricket player," Olson said. "This constantly reminds me of myself and my own childhood dream [of becoming a race car driver]."

Olson said his parents taught him throughout his life to give to those less fortunate.

"My parents are pretty traditional and they definitely taught us over the years that it's important to think of others and that giving back is important, no matter how small the act is," he said.
